Expressive Therapies: Integrating Mind/Body Therapies into Practice

A Study Class for Professionals

Mind/body therapies have become increasingly popular in clinical and psychotherapeutic settings and are especially useful as non-verbal complements to traditional medical and psychotherapeutic practices. While mind/body medicine is a field that is ripe for psychologists, most psychologists are not trained in how to integrate these techniques into their ongoing therapeutic practices. This workshop will provide a basic introduction for therapists interested in learning how to integrate some of these practices into their own work. After a theoretical orientation, participants will begin to learn and practice these skills in small groups.
